“ My dad didn't care enough to be around in my life. Because of that I can't make myself call anyone dad. So, Doug may not have been my dad but he was the closest thing I had to one. In the time he was in my life he was with us even through the hardest parts, even when we lived in an actual junk yard, he was there. And it's not like he didn't have options. He has lots of family that would have let him stay with them so he could have things a bit easier. But he didn't, he chose to stick it out with us. Towards the end he physically couldn't be with us because of how much pain he'd be in but I know if he could have he would have been. I don't know if Doug had any big impact on my life but I like to think he did. I'll always remember Doug and the things he did for us, the sacrifices he made, and the love he had for us.

I'm not religious but I hope where ever you are now Doug, that you're happy. You at least deserve to be happy.
