*I may not have liked you sometimes, but I always loved you unconditionally, no matter what! We didn't always get along but I never quit caring! We drove each other crazy most of the time, shared 52 years of memories, both good and bad, but I knew someday you would leave and never be back and I had to face the facts that I would never be ready for that day! Now you're gone and even though you didn't like me much I knew you always loved me in your own uniquely mean way! I did my best to take care of you always even though you never cared what I did because it never seemed to be good enough for you, unless it was something bad, and then you made sure the whole world knew about it! In the end, it was me and only me, no matter how hard, heartbreaking or defeating it was, I was ALWAYS there! I hope you made it, and if so, I hope to see you again someday! Maybe by then you will have realized and come to grips with it all, and who knows....you may even appreciate and like me in our next lives! I already miss you, like I knew I would, always will love you, like I always said, and will forever be thankful, in my own uniquely way, for many things you taught me about so many things in life and in so many ways! You were definitely one of a kind!!!
I love you!!! ~Rea Ann~*

Hey, texas girl from Abilene, I met you in Concord, California when y'all came to Silverwood Elementary.

Was told you had died from heat stroke after you all moved back to Texas.

A man similar to your dad taught me carpentry, and my Dad loves that "Danny Boy" song. He never told me he loved me, yet he supported his adopted children's spouse more than me.

We look alike in the 5th or 6th grade photos of our class, check it out if you have it still.
